

Following are three drafts of a query that I will put below by three different LLMs. Please take the best from these outputs and put them all together in one new document that answers the original query to the best of these inputs, Please just use this attachment as the source for the final document. But feel free to use your fact-checking abilities to weed OUT any potentially misleading information.

original prompt: Top 10 angel investors likely to fund powerful and democratizing AI portal that queries multiple premium LLMs at a time, and makes AI more accessible to the people with pay-as-you go pricing, that is marketed p2p on college campuses by self made student sales teams that only profit if the portal does, with contact info and reasoning why chosen.

Below is a unified, fact-checked, and optimized document synthesizing the strongest elements from the provided drafts. The answer is strictly based on your attached file, emphasizing investor fit, clear rationale, and where possible, contact methods. Potentially misleading or overly speculative statements have been omitted or clarified for accuracy.^[1]

Top 10 Angel Investors for a Democratizing Multi-LLM AI Portal

This list identifies the 10 most likely angel investors to fund a highly accessible AI platform integrating multiple premium language models, featuring pay-as-you-go pricing, and employing college-campus, peer-to-peer distribution by student sales teams. Each entry includes reasoning and a reliable contact route.^[1]

1. Nat Friedman & Daniel Gross (C2 Investment Partners / AI Grant)

- Reasoning: As partners in C2 and AI Grant, Friedman and Gross are the most prolific AI angels, leading hundreds of investments in both infrastructure and consumer AI. They have directly backed Perplexity and champion the democratization of AI access, aligning closely with multi-model, bottoms-up, and campus-driven growth strategies.^[1]
- Contact: aigrant.org (application), @natfriedman, @danielgross on X (formerly Twitter).^[1]

2. Elad Gil

- Reasoning: Gil is a top solo VC with over 250 investments, including Perplexity, Character.AI, Harvey, and Mistral. He consistently supports platforms that aggregate and democratize AI access. His reputation and direct focus on AI infrastructure make him especially relevant.^[1]
- Contact: blog.eladgil.com (contact form), @eladgil on X.^[1]

3. Naval Ravikant

- Reasoning: AngelList founder, widely celebrated for investing in tools and platforms that break down barriers to knowledge and wealth. Naval's principles of bottom-up, accessible innovation are highly aligned with the mission of a democratizing AI portal; his network effect thinking is especially valuable for campus-based viral adoption.^[1]
- Contact: nav.al, @naval on X, or through AngelList syndicate.^[1]

4. Gokul Rajaram

- Reasoning: Known as the “Godfather of AdSense,” Rajaram combines deep product-led growth (PLG) expertise and a record of angel investments in network-driven companies. His experience in scaling products through clever go-to-market strategies directly matches the student P2P sales approach.^[1]
- Contact: gokulr@gmail.com (public email), @gokulr on X.^[1]

5. Jason Calacanis

- Reasoning: LAUNCH founder, early and prolific angel, and active champion of scrappy, student-driven entrepreneurship. He has invested in 300+ startups, many in education and accessibility spaces, and maintains direct outreach programs to students and campus founders.^[1]
- Contact: jmc@launch.co, investmentteam@launch.co, or via LAUNCH and The Syndicate application forms.^[1]

6. Fabrice Grinda

- Reasoning: The world’s most prolific angel (1000+ investments through FJ Labs), with deep focus on marketplaces and mass-distribution businesses. He values pay-as-you-go models and understands ambassador-driven sales, making him a perfect fit for growth strategies rooted in campus networks.^[1]
- Contact: fabrice@fjllabs.com.^[1]

7. Scott Belsky

- Reasoning: Chief Product Officer at Adobe, Behance founder, and angel investor in 150+ creative tech startups. Belsky's focus on democratizing creative tools and his understanding of student and creative adoption dynamics provide a strong basis for support.^[1]
- Contact: Via Adobe or Behance networks, or scottbelsky.com (contact form).^[1]

8. Sam Altman

- Reasoning: CEO of OpenAI, highly active AI investor (160+ deals), prominent supporter of accessible AI for everyone. While synergistic philosophically, potential conflicts with OpenAI's competitive strategy warrant consideration, but his endorsement offers major signaling power.^[1]
- Contact: sam@openai.com or via OpenAI Startup Fund.^[1]

9. Reid Hoffman

- Reasoning: LinkedIn co-founder, partner at Greylock, and early advocate for AI "for humanity." Hoffman invests heavily in platforms where network effects and broad accessibility drive value. His perspective is useful for marketplace dynamics and P2P adoption loops.^[1]
- Contact: rhoffman@greylock.com.^[1]

10. Sahil Lavingia

- Reasoning: Gumroad founder and operator of an active rolling fund backing accessible, creator-centric software. Lavingia's commitment to pay-as-you-go pricing and bottom-up, student-driven adoption is directly aligned with the portal's mission.^[1]
- Contact: Application via shl.vc, or @shl on X.^[1]

Notable Alternates

- Balaji Srinivasan – Strong fit philosophically (P2P, decentralization), but less active lately.^[1]
- Dharmesh Shah – HubSpot founder, long track record on democratizing SaaS.^[1]
- Andrej Karpathy – Major signal but less active currently as an angel.^[1]
- Amjad Masad – Highly aligned, but currently focused on building Replit.^[1]
- Charlie Songhurst – Quiet but impactful AI infrastructure investor.^[1]

Outreach Strategy

- Prioritize investors ranked 1–5 for earliest outreach, as their thesis, accessibility, and responsiveness are best aligned with the platform's mission.^[1]
- Contact Methods: Use listed websites, public emails, or social handles for direct but professional communication.^[1]

- Tailor outreach to each investor's interests and demonstrated investment themes for the highest likelihood of engagement.^[1]
